District Teenagers Convicted of Murder, Other Charges in Killing That Took Place During an Attempted Robbery - Victim Was Slain While Trying to Save His Friend -

WASHINGTON - Aaron Andrews, 19, and Curtis Weeks, 18, were convicted by a jury today of first degree felony murder while armed and other charges in a killing that took place in September 2009 in Southeast Washington, U.S. Attorney Ronald C. Machen Jr. announced. The victim was slain while coming to the aid of his friend during an attempted robbery.

The jury's verdict followed a two-week trial in the Superior Court of the District of Columbia. The defendants, both from Washington, D.C., also were convicted of charges of second degree murder while armed, attempted armed robbery, assault with a dangerous weapon, and various firearms offenses. They are to be sentenced September 9, 2011 by the Honorable Thomas J. Motley. The defendants face at least 30 years in prison.

According to the government's evidence, on September 25, 2009, at about 10 p.m., Andrews and Weeks were in the area near a parking lot in the 1100 block of Eaton Road SE, where several men were taking part in a dice game. During the game, the players were placing money on the ground, in plain view, and Andrews and Weeks took notice. They subsequently left the area, and that was when the decedent, Reggie Cook, arrived. His friends were among those in the dice game, and the 20-year-old Cook wanted to be with them that night.

A short time later, Andrews and Weeks returned to the parking lot - armed with guns. Andrews demanded money at gunpoint from one of the decedent's friends. As the friend tried to run, Andrews shot him in the stomach. Having seen his friend get shot, Cook came to his friend's defense by grabbing Andrews's gun. As Cook and Andrews fought over the gun, Weeks shot Cook in the chin, killing him. The victim was killed on his mother's birthday.

In announcing the verdicts, U.S. Attorney Machen praised the efforts of those who worked on the case from the Metropolitan Police Department (MPD), including the lead detective, James Wilson; Detectives Gus Giannakoulis, Eric Fenton, Robert Cephas, William Xanten, Anthony Greene, Joshua Branson, and Norma Horne; Lead Mobile Crime Officer William Hyatt; Mobile Crime Officers Tina Ramadhan, Kemper Agee and Keith Slaughter, and Officers Jeffrey Wade, Marcus Smith and Alvin Lytle.

U.S. Attorney Machen also expressed thanks to the entire trial team from the U.S. Attorney's Office, including Tracy Van Atta, who produced numerous trial exhibits; Paul Howell, Kimberly Smith and Joseph Calvarese, who provided technical support and exhibits; Paralegal Marian Russell who prepared the case for trial, and criminal investigators Shannon Alexis, John Marsh and Larry Grasso, who provided invaluable assistance with investigative leads. He also acknowledged the work of Laverne Forrest, Debra Cannon, Tanya Via, Michael Hailey, David Foster and Katina Adams of the Victim Witness Assistance Unit for their help in working with witnesses before and during the trial, and victim witness advocate Marcy Rinker, who lent invaluable support to the victim's family throughout the trial.

Finally, he expressed appreciation for the work of Assistant U.S. Attorney Seth Waxman, who investigated and prosecuted the case.
